In the best tradition of San Diego State University the Institute for Ethics and Public Affairs is engaged in research and education that makes a positive contribution to the world. The research it supports concerns public policy problems that involve complex moral issues. The educational programs it is developing focus on human rights and global justice.

The Institute is also a resource to members of the campus community, the larger community of scholars, and the greater San Diego community who wish to pursue thoughtful discussion and research as a means of clarifying moral problems.

The Institute is housed in the Philosophy Department, but it seeks interdisciplinary discussion and collaboration since clarity on contemporary moral problems often involves both the application of normative theorizing and empirical investigation.

The Institute is seeking funding in the form of charitable giving. This includes options to name the Institute, a director’s chair, its visiting scholar fellowships, or its graduate student fellowships. The Institute is also seeking foundation support and government grants. Contact Darrel Moellendorf at (619) 594-5249 or ethics@mail.sdsu.edu.

“Better it is for philosophy to err in active participation in the living struggles and issues of its own age and times than to maintain an immune monastic impeccability.” – John Dewey
The Institute for Ethics and Public Affairs prioritizes research and public discussion in the following four areas:

Human Rights and Global Justice
- Theoretical research into the justification and scope of human rights and social justice. Applied research into the relationship between global poverty, injustice, and human rights deprivation.

Climate Ethics
- Research into the global and intergenerational scope of justice, rights, and responsibility as they relate to climate change mitigation and adaptation policy.

Democratic Equality
- Research into the value of equality and the disvalue of inequality in relation to democratic institutions and citizenship.

Health, Health Care, and Medical Research Ethics
- Theoretical research into health and human rights and healthcare delivery and justice. Applied research into the norms of good clinical practice and medical research and into proposals that aim to improve both clinical practice and research.

The Institute is engaged in curriculum development around both an undergraduate minor and an MA degree in Human Rights and Global Justice. The latter serves students who seek strong training in normative philosophy and who seek to become leaders in international NGOs.

The Institute cooperates on the research project Changing Norms of Global Governance with the Institute for Intercultural and International Studies at the Universität Bremen. And it supports international research on global poverty and the project Academics Stand Against Poverty.

The Institute also has a prestigious board of international advisors, including:

- Gillian Brock, Professor of Philosophy, University of Auckland, New Zealand;
- Simon Caney, Professor of Political Theory, Oxford University, UK;
- Stefan Gosepath, Professor of Philosophy, Goethe-Universität, Frankfurt, Germany;
- Sebastiano Maffetone, University Professor, LUISS-Guido Carli University, Rome, Italy;
- Thaddeus Metz, Professor of Philosophy, University of Johannesburg, South Africa; and
- Heather Widdows, Professor of Global Ethics, University of Birmingham, UK.
